

6516205997.txt

Here are three points reflecting my respectful urge for the FCC to reject NAB's petition 04-160.

1) I pay for this service, from this vendor, and do not feel that my rights to hear what I pay to hear should be constricted by some broad "association" looking to protect their own interests.

2) If the NAB were supplying the kind of product I want to use, I would not be paying for this service from another source -- chip away at the radio service I pay for , and I'll be forced to remove ALL radio from my life.

3) It is clear to me that XM is owned by ClearChannel. I am sure ClearChannel plays a large part in the NAB. ClearChannel broadcasts pablum for free, and I in turn pay them $10/mo for higher quality programming. The competition that drives a free economy would seem to be instigated by itself, now the people have spoken, and the potential loser (the ones who started this thing in the first place) are starting to whine. The people have spoken, and can clearly support this market. If the NAB starts censoring the material, are they not violating some ideal this country, and vastly more importantly, this economy was founded on?